

Abstract of the Invention

The invention described herein comprises libraries of expressible gene sequences. Such gene sequences are contained on plasmid vectors designed to endow the expressed proteins with a number of useful features such as affinity purification tags, epitope tags, and the like. The expression vectors containing such gene sequences can be used to transfect cells for the production of recombinant proteins. A further aspect of the invention comprises methods of identifying binding partners for the products of such expressible gene sequences.